[Madam/Mr.] President,
Executive Secretary,
Distinguished Excellencies,
Ladies and Gentlemen,

The Czech Republic aligns itself with the statement delivered on behalf of the European Union.

Let me first thank the Government and people of Rwanda for their warm hospitality and for hosting this meeting, and the Ozone Secretariat for its dedicated support.

Returning to Kigali ten years after the adoption of the Kigali Amendment reminds us of what patient diplomacy can achieve. Full implementation is estimated to avoid 0.3 to 0.5 degrees Celsius of warming by 2100. Rwanda and all Parties can rightly take pride in this legacy.

Parties have phased out nearly 99 percent of controlled ozone-depleting substances. The ozone layer is recovering. These results show that international cooperation can deliver when science guides decisions and commitments lead to action.

Science must remain our foundation. Emerging risks, unexplained emissions and discrepancies between reported data and atmospheric observations require careful examination, guided by the Assessment Panels. Our decisions must respond to evidence and deliver measurable environmental benefits.

Successful implementation also requires practical solutions. National circumstances, capacities and development needs differ. Policies and funding must reflect these differences while preserving agreed commitments. Ambition must be matched by the means to deliver.

Trust matters equally. This applies to cooperation among Parties and within our regional arrangements. Cooperation requires mutual respect and a genuine willingness to work together. It cannot be imposed through pressure. Where views differ, patient dialogue and mutually acceptable solutions are essential, with respect for established practices and the Parties concerned.

As we move towards alternative technologies, we must consider their full lifecycle impact. Combining low-global-warming-potential refrigerants with energy-efficient equipment can increase climate benefits. We should pursue solutions that deliver the greatest overall environmental benefit.

The credibility of the Protocol also depends on effective implementation. Illegal production and trade undermine environmental objectives, distort markets and weaken trust. Strong licensing systems, reliable reporting and cooperation among customs and enforcement authorities are essential. Non-compliance must be addressed promptly, constructively and fairly.

[Madam/Mr.] President,

For more than three decades, the Multilateral Fund has helped developing countries turn commitments into practical action. Predictable and sustainable financing remains essential, including for the Kigali Amendment. Support must build lasting capacity and deliver measurable results on the ground. We encourage all Parties in a position to do so to support these efforts, in line with their evolving economic capacities.

The Czech Republic remains committed to the Montreal Protocol and the Kigali Amendment. We stand ready to share our technical expertise and experience in implementation, market supervision and enforcement.

Let us build on this Protocol's legacy through decisions grounded in science, cooperation sustained by trust and commitments translated into practical results. This is how we can continue protecting the ozone layer, the climate and future generations.

Thank you for your attention.
