

Activities held in El Salvador on the occasion of the 2006 International Day for the Preservation of the Ozone Layer

- Ozone Day celebrations took place two weeks after 16 September and included an official programme in which the Minister of Environment and Natural Resources gave a lecture on the actions that the Ministry has taken in complying with the Montreal Protocol.
- There was a presentation of the Observation Route to Guatemala, showing the agricultural technologies free of methyl bromide, demonstrating their efficiency. It is expected that both activities will help farmers to support the development of a technified, efficient and methyl bromide-free farming in El Salvador.
- The Ozone Officer was interviewed by the newspaper ""El Diario de Hoy" on ozone issues and the interview was published as well as other related articles. The Ozone Officer was also invited by the Justice Supreme Court to give a lecture on this issue.
- The mass communication media was present in all of the events mentioned above.
