The government checks for the respective critical use exemption in every category whether alternatives are not technically and economically feasible and checks whether the amount, which end users apply to purchase, does not exceed the approved amount of each category. With this confirmation, methyl bromide manufacturing companies apply production permit to the authorities. When the authorities confirm this application amount does not exceed approved amount, they give production permit to the manufacturing companies through who methyl bromide of critical use exemption is delivered to the end users with critical use exemption allowed.
